Engaging Diasporas in Conflict Resolution and Transitional Justice: The Kurdish Diaspora and the Peace Process in Turkey
Bahar Baser*

Colloquium Series
“Global Migration as the New Social Question“
Sociology of Transnationalization, Development and Migration
Wednesday, February 01, 16-18 c.t.
Room: X-B2-103

The growing literature on diasporas' involvement in homeland conflicts shows that new global diasporas have the power to influence political, social and economic developments in their country of origin and residence. Although this is an emerging field of research, there is still much to discover about long-distance nationalism and the roles that diasporas play in conflict resolution and transitional justice mechanisms.

In this presentation, Baser intends to fill this gap in the literature by first reviewing the existing literature on diaspora nationalism and engagement in homeland conflicts, and then scrutinizing the Kurdish Diaspora as a case study in order to demonstrate the complexities and challenges of integrating diaspora narratives into a peace, reconciliation and transitional justice framework.

*Bahar Baser is a research fellow at the Centre for Peace, Trust and Social Relations, Coventry University. She completed a PhD in Social and Political Sciences at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy. Bahar’s research interests include ethno-national conflicts and political violence, conflict resolution, third party mediation, migration and diaspora studies.

All those interested are cordially invited!