Additional information

All information on this page is strictly confidential and is therefore not available to you here.

Here you can provide optional information on circumstances that have influenced your academic career to date, so that we can take these into account in your favour when assessing your performance. Examples of special circumstances or delays include long-term or chronic illnesses, disability, childcare (including as a single parent where applicable), parental leave, caring for relatives, military service, alternative service or voluntary service, honorary positions, restrictions due to the COVID-19 pandemic, funding your studies through your own work, being the first in your family to pursue a degree (being the first generation in your family to study), migration or integration phases, language acquisition and asylum applications. Please state the extent to which / for how long you were employed, carried out voluntary work or similar, or to what extent you were affected by illness, care responsibilities, etc. All information will be treated confidentially. This information cannot be viewed by your faculty, research group or supervisor. Like all other details, it will be forwarded to the Commission for Research and Young Researchers, which will assess your application.

Current research/dissertation project

Current research

Title of your current research project*

Description of your current research project

Max. 3,000 characters: a brief and generally understandable description of your PhD or your current research project and the associated research objectives. Please note: The quality of your project will be taken into account in the assessment of your application. It must be comprehensible to university staff from other disciplines for the purposes of peer review. Explain your research questions/hypotheses and how they fit into the current state of research; outline your methodological approach; and explain your role and contribution to the project. References within your text (author, year) are permitted, but a reference list is not required. If you completed your PhD in the last year and are still in the process of developing a new project, please feel free to include your research from your PhD period here.*

Planned project during the funding period

Description of the proposed activity

Max. 2,500 characters: Description of the project, equipment, etc., for which you are applying, and how it fits into your project. If your project is not part of your current project but is instead in preparation for your own application for third-party funding, you may be eligible for the 'Entry into Third-Party Funded Research' funding scheme. Explain the significance of the project or equipment, etc., for your project and your future academic career. State why the project/equipment, etc., is not covered by your existing funding or basic facilities. Lay out your timetable. Here too, it is essential that your plan is clear and comprehensible to reviewers who are not from your field.

Timetable

Please outline the steps you plan to take for each month, from the date of your application until the end of the scholarship. Please note that you may apply for scholarships lasting between 1 and 6 months. It is not possible to extend the period for which you have applied. Please describe here both the work on your project and any preparations for its funding, e.g. drafting project proposals/applications, as well as other career development steps such as further training, networking, etc. The timetable forms part of the assessment. Therefore, please ensure that the reviewers can follow it and assess its feasibility.
